

Denver Water received approval on Sept. 17, 2013, from Boulder County to develop a small test quarry near Gross Reservoir Dam. This will allow us to study the potential to produce sand and gravel on site for the proposed enlargement of Gross Reservoir. Information related to this permit can be reviewed at bouldercounty.org.

Flood damage to roadways in the area has delayed the start of this work. We expect this project to begin before the end of the year.

Several small blasts will be required to accomplish this work. We will send you the blasting schedule by mail prior to beginning work. Because the schedule can change, we also would like to send you an email the day prior to each blast, and email you with any schedule changes to keep you up to date. To receive these updates, please email: publicinformation@denverwater.org.

For questions regarding this project, please contact Joe Sloan at the email listed above, or call 303-628-6320. Project information is available at denverwater.org/moffat.
